

British Pianist Nicola Eimer has performed as a soloist and chamber music across Europe, Asia and America and has played at the major UK venues including the Barbican and Wigmore Hall.

A graduate of New York's Juilliard School, Nicola held a Fulbright Scholarship to study with Joseph Kalichstein. She previously studied in London with Danielle Salamon, and then with Christopher Elton at the Royal Academy of Music, where she was subsequently awarded a Fellowship and then nominated an Associate of the Academy.

Nicola's passion for chamber music has led to a wide range of partnerships, in duos as well as larger ensembles. She has won both the chamber music and solo awards in the Royal Overseas League Music Competition. Nicola enjoys an active partnership with the Swedish violinist Johan Dalene, with whom she has performed across Scandinavia, as well as in Radio 3 recordings, for BBC's New Generation Artists scheme. In the 2021/2022 season they played in many of the major concert halls in Europe, as part of the ECHO series.

Nicola is regularly invited to be a guest accompanist at international competitions, and has played for the Menuhin and the Carl Nielsen International Violin Competitions.

In February 2019, Nicola's CD "So Many Stars" was released on Stone Records, with acclaimed violinist Fenella. It was described as "hugely rewarding" by The Observer; "an absolutely exquisite album" by BBC Radio 3's Record Review, and was The Strad's Recommended Recording of the month.

Teaching and lecturing are an important part of Nicola's musical life. She has maintained a close connection with the Royal Academy of Music, as a teacher of piano accompaniment and chamber music, as well as the piano lecturer on their piano pedagogy LRAM course. Nicola is also Head of Keyboard at Highgate School in London.
